

Vayia Panagiotidis

Vayia Panagiotidi studied Engineering Physics at the National Technical University of Athens and later gained her MSc in Digital Communications and Networks from the University of Piraeus. After ten years working in the private sector in the development of international high pressure natural gas projects she is currently a research associate of the University of the Peloponnese in the Laboratory of Archaeometry, focusing mainly on the use of Information Technology in Archaeology and Cultural Heritage.